CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

From what has been discussed in the previous chapter, the writer can draw the conclusion as follows.

Vianne and Isabelle are the main character in the novel. They both sisters. When Nazi sucks them into his war, both of sisters have their own motivation to struggle for courage and express their strenght to fight in the different way. There are some strong reason that motivate Vianne struggle for courage. The first is her daughter, Sophie. As a mother she wants to protect her daughter. The second is when she sees Rachel in difficulty. Rachel is her Jewish best friend who is deported by Nazi. As a friend she wants to help her. The third is her sister, Isabelle. As an older sister when her younger sister in danger, she wants to make her save. And the last is the other Jewish child who is leaved by his mother. As a mother who also has child, she wants to do something for help. Different from Vianne, Isabelle has her own motivation to struggle for courage. There are some strong reason that motivate her. The first is inspired by woman hero, Edith Cavell. She wants to be like Edith who has made difference in Great War. The second is for the sake of Free France. She does not want to let Nazi destroy her country. The last is her conviction to show that woman can do what man can do. She wants to show that woman can be useful in war.`

The courage that is shown by two main characters, Vianne and Isabelle, in the novel is described into four character strength which relate to courage: Bravery, persistance, integrity, and vitality. After struggling and facing many things during Nazi occupies France. Both of them show the same strength such as: both can be considered as brave because their actions put them into the danger and it also can be called as heroism, both have strength to continue striving for the goal and dedicate their life to help many people, both has done the right thing for the right reason even it is not easy choice , and both has spirit to face obstacle from the activities they choose to engage .

Finaly, after analyzing this study the writer has learned that courage is the most important thing that has to be struggled. The quality of courage allows the human being to face life, especially in the moments where someone can experience fear or danger. The courage also give someone strength. This strength make someone will have strong stance for doing something.
