This study uses descriptive qualitative method using psychoanalysis approach. The result, this study depicts that the personality of Gopal Mishra as the main character is built in the level of consciousness and unconsciousness. In the level of consciousness, it is constructed by two components which are function of the soul and the attitude of the soul. In the function of the soul there are four categories which are thinking, feeling, sensing, and intuition and Gopal belongs to individual whose feeling function. It is proven by his judgement, emotion, and behavior. In the attitude of the soul, there are two categories which are introversion and extroversion. In this case, Gopal belongs to introversion as he is difficult to associate, hiding his judgement, being pessimist, and having an inner conflict. in the unconscious level, there are personal and collective unconsciousness. In the personal level, it is marked by his personal experience which is lost his father and having bad treat from his relative.
