

APPENDIX I

The appendix in this research presents the raw data extracted from the NOW Corpus, specifically the concordance lines associated with the word “AIRSTRIKE” as used in BBC and CNN news articles about the Gaza-Israel conflict. Each entry in the appendix is labeled with a code for easy identification and analysis. For instance, codes like B1S1 and C1S1 are used to refer to specific sentences within the data set. The letter “B” stands for BBC, and “C” represents CNN, which are the two media sources examined in this study. The number following the letter (1), (2), (3) indicates the sentence number of the collocation word based on frequency. The “S1” part refers to the sentence number selected from that collocation group. So, B1S1 means the first sentence under the first collocation from BBC, while C2S1 would mean the first sentence under the second most frequent collocation from CNN.
