

CHAPTER IV

CONCLUSION

In this chapter, the thesis writer has provided a brief glimpse of its major component of problems by considering the analysis of the previous chapter. It is virtually a conclusion of Charlie's conflict and the others' influence on the Charlie's conflict and also Charlie's effort to cope his conflict.

After analyzing the conflict of the main character found in the novel The Perks of Being a Wallflower by Stephen Chbosky, there are some points that can be concluded. After his only best friend suicides and a friend from the same middle school doesn't want to be friend with him anymore, he struggle with his loneliness in the high school as a freshman.

Charlie is a shy type who always observe people and think a lot about it . He spends most of his time watching other people who have fun and hope that he could take a part of but he just doesn't know how to do it.

Charlie see things but he keep quiet about them. Charlie doesn't say much and almost have no one to talk to. That's why he is called a wallflower .

However through the novel he finally find friends who help him to out of his own shell and to be more participating in social life.

Meanwhile, Charlie's external conflicts come out because he has an extremely shy personality and he sometimes gets too emotional . He doesn't have a friend when he enters a high school and the first person who encounters him is his English teacher , Bill who concern about him who always think a lot . Then, there is Patrick and Sam the two first person who become his friends and introduce him to other friends who also become his friends . With them, he experiences love and friendship.

Finally, based on the characteristic of the novel itself, that the novel is also the picture and as the representatives of human real life. The Perks of Being A Wallflower taught the reader to be more participate. Becoming complacent within our shell is something we can all relate to. Charlie in The Perks of Being a Wallflower steps outside of himself which ironically lead him to discover more about the person he is.

It can be found a moral suggestions concern with how should the characters face theirs conflict. The conflict that found from the novel is triggered by natural events that that really exist in real life. The conflict cannot be avoided, but must be faced wisely. The external conflict that a person encounter will push them to learn and to understand to each other, they will learn to respect the different opinion might be wrong or contraction from the character view, it is a natural that every human has their own way of life. Meanwhile, the internal conflict can build the person to be a better individual for the future. This is because the internal conflict offers the lesson to think and to consider about the decision and action that should they make.

So it can be drawn the characteristics of the conflict itself are able to comes out anytime and it is obviously inevitable. In this novel, the writer also shows that the motif of the conflict is by look no age, position, religion, and no matter who is the person, everyone has to encounters conflicts in their life.
