

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION

Based on the analysis in chapter four, this study comes to the conclusion. There are two points to conclude the analysis from the previous chapter. Firstly, it describes the characteristic Louisa Clark and Will Trynor as presented by Jojo Moyes in Me Before You. Louisa is described as anxious women, unconfident, beautiful and a hardworker, while Will Trynor is described as a selfish man but generous. The ways the author portrays Louisa Clark and Will Trynor Through their characteristic by using Murphy theory such as from the physical appearance, conversation among the characters and the opinion of other characters. Secondly, it is about the type of love in Louisa and Will life. Louisa Clark shows the readers that she has interpersonal love is shown between Louisa and her prents who alaways support her carrier as Caregiver.

Companionate love is shown between Louisa and her parents how close they are and romantic love is shown between Louisa and Will Trynor when Louisa being Caregiver to takecare him, they build romantic love and they exprees their feeling each other. Whereas Will Trynor exposed his impersonal love. Will's interpesonal love can be seen when he loves with his principle and also with his activities in the past before the accident happens which makes him suffer illness called quadriplagic. Will's also classified as storge love is shown when he close with Louisa Clark as his Caregiver who always give him attention, it makes him falling in love with her, and it's make him happy when they are together.
